PREFACE
The Land of the Sky

We herewith present to the public Vol. VIII of the Asheville City Directory. A glance through its pages, by even the most casual observer, with the fact that this is the third annual issue, should be conclusive proof to convince all that Asheville has outlived its life as a mere mountain village, famous on account of its superb location and the healthful, invigorating, salubrious cli mate; that no longer can it be regarded as simply a summer and winter resort, dependent almost entirely upon the revenues derived from the great horde of tourists who yearly travel here, to and fro, from all parts of the globe.

The stage of infancy and childhood remain not with us long, the alert, robust young man of today was a babe 2½ decades ago, was a "babe in swaddling clothes," dependent upon others for substance and life; but with each passing year the child grew. It soon became a man. So Asheville—Asheville the village—in the same span of time has become Asheville, the commercial giant of Western North Carolina, and the pride of the Old North State.

Situated as few cities are, high up beyond the reach of all poisonous germs that are found in the low lands; up where the air is crisp and dry, where clouds and mountain peaks embrace; where not long ago the eagle's scream was heard; where the sun rising in all its glory, mounting barrier after barrier, sheds its brilliant rays into many an enchanting nook and corner; where the evergreens cluster, and blooms the rhododendron; where the twilight softly fades away behind forest hills and Balsam's highest peak as "the curfew tolls the knell of parting day;" where ever rippling rills from springs of water pure flow down the mountain sides, wending their way around cliffs, through gorge and vale, forming as they go mighty rivers on their way to the sea; where picturesque sites for handsome homes invite, and the scenic loveliness entrance. Nature has formed no more beautiful spot, so acknowledged by world-traveled persons.

To the north, to the south, to the east and to the west, on all sides, behold a tremendous territory, practically undeveloped save for a few farming interests; yet, possessing unlimited opportunities for future industries. With such advantages and with such environments, who dare say that the population of Asheville will not more than double within the next decade and make the Queen city of the land of the sky the recognized leading municipality of the state? Be this a conservative statement, a mystic dream, or what it may, the fact remains that Asheville is growing and growing fast, and as citizens we have much for which to feel proud; for here—

"In the heart of the highlands are the modest homes we love;
Green stretch the dimpled glens below, blue rise the crests above,
By Swannanoa's water, where Zehleeka flows;
If we miss the royal lily, Hope still finds a rustic rose.

"No rugged Alps are ours, forever crowned with snow,
But on Appalachian summits the April violets blow,
And leafy leagues of woodland, ere May hath half outrun,
Shall hide our boldest brooklets from the searching of the sun.

"Under Elseetoss close nestles the nook I love the best;
'Tis there I reap but roses when Love's Litiny confessed,
And my heart shall never wander, and my feet would never stray,
From a little garden yonder in the Hills of Otteray."

Estimates of the population of a city is a matter necessarily enjoined upon the directory publisher. We are very much gratified at the figures which we herewith tender, which show a marked increase over our last issue and which are more accurate, as the number of names contained in this issue have not been estimated but were obtained by an actual count. The figures represent all persons living or doing business within the city, as well as those living in the adjacent suburbs which help to make a city and in fact are a part of it. The book contains 11,552 names of individuals (wives, children and firm names being excluded) using the conservative multiple 2½ times gives a population of 28,880. (A great many Directory publishers use 3 and 3½ times and a few as high as 4 times).

In concluding we desire to thank our patrons for their support and the public in general for so courteously giving us the desired information. As to who's who we refer you to the advertising pages.

The ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

Daily, Sunday and Semi-Weekly

¶ Three publications that go into nearly every home in Asheville and Western North Carolina.

¶ Full Associated Press reports furnish the telegraphic news of the world, and special correspondents supply the state news from all of the principal cities of the state. A competent news staff thoroughly covers the local field, and many metropolitan features place the Daily, Sunday and Semi-weekly Citizen among the leading publications of the South.

¶ They are excellent advertising mediums which are liberally patronized by the local merchants of Asheville as well as by general advertisers from all parts of the country.

¶ If you live in Asheville or Western North Carolina, you are already a subscriber, but if you are a stranger in this city you should place your name on our subscription books today. You cannot afford to be without one of these papers during your stay in Western North Carolina. : : : : : : :
